

INSOLVENCY REPORT

A closer look at company insolvencies across the glazing & wider construction industry.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Welcome to the latest edition of Insight Data's monthly Insolvency Report which provides you with an exclusive look into the state of the fenestration, construction and building product industries.

After May's concerning surge in business failures across all sectors, June 2025 has delivered some more positive news with our analysis revealing a decline in insolvencies. However, while the numbers are moving in the right direction, the overall results suggest the industry continues to navigate choppy waters.

Our latest findings reveal the most striking difference is the 48.5 per cent fall in small builder insolvencies which decreased from 165 in May to 85 in June. The builders' merchants sector also saw a significant 46.7 per cent drop, falling from 15 to just eight insolvencies in June. Similarly, architectural firm failures dropped by 36.4 per cent – from 33 to 21.

The fenestration sector, made up of fabricators and installers, also experienced a slight dip in the number of businesses shutting shop which fell from 121 in May to 109 in June – a 9.9 per cent fall. Although this percentage change is smaller, the numbers remain high, reflecting the squeeze on mid-sized supply and installation businesses, many of which continue to face tight margins, extended payment terms and lower consumer demand.

Finally, main contractors (£5 million-plus) recorded a 50 per cent increase in insolvencies but from a very small base, rising from two to three – highlighting the continued volatility of construction companies in the current climate.

While June's figures offer some breathing space after May's alarming spike, the results show us that insolvencies have slowed across most sectors. That said, the construction industry continues to face significant headwinds and businesses must remain vigilant and proactive to survive and grow.

In this challenging environment, having access to accurate, real-time market intelligence has never been more critical.
